SIMON STREET AND ANN KAY STREET

Simon Street, son of Thomas Street and Mary Bates, was born in Staffordshire, England. Married Mary Ann Bates Swetfield, a widow and his cousin. Married Ann Kay Street, his brother William's widow in 1883. Died Aug. 28, 1922. Buried in Heber Cemetery.

Ann Kay Street, daughter of Joseph Kay and Mary Howarth Street, was born December 31, 1853, at Bolton, Lancashire, England. Married William Street who was born June 11, 1843 at Staffordshire, England. He died in 1881 at Park City, Utah. Ann died May 21, 1930. Buried in Heber Cemetery.

Simon Street emigrated with his family to Utah when he was young.

He worked in the coal mines in England at a very early age and then in the mines in Wyoming. He worked in the mines eighteen years in all.

He married Mary Ann Bates Swetfield his cousin, she had three sons, John Swetfield, Gus Swetfield and Nimrod Swetfield.

Simon and Mary Ann had five children:
Mary Street, married William Richens;
Emma Street, married Edward Phillips;
George Street, married Etta Luke;
Hyrum Street, married Ethel —;
Luana Street, married Frank Carpenter.

He married Ann Kay Street, his brother's widow. She and William had four children:

Mary Hannah Street, married James Yates;

Elizabeth Street, married Orson Daniel Edwards;

William Street, married Louise —;
Alice Street, died when 22 years old.

Ann Kay's father was president of the Branch of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in England. He was a very good musician and gave violin lessons.

He worked in the textile mills where he contracted consumption from which he died.

At the age of eight years, Ann Kay emigrated to Utah with her Uncle and Aunt

Richard and Alice Barnes. They came across the plains with ox teams in Captain Thompson's Company. Starting from St. Joseph, Missouri and arriving in Heber City, the fall of 1866. Her mother and two sisters came two years later. They saw all the hardships of pioneer life. She told of working for fifty cents a week and earning enough to buy a calico dress and a pair of shoes.

Simon and Ann Street were married in 1883 and lived in Park City for two years, where one son was born.

They came to Midway in the fall of 1886 and bought sixty acres of land from Fan Waddell.

Their seven children were:

Joseph Street, married Pearl Galli;

Cora Street, married Rollie Baum;

Daniel Street, married Malissa Casper;

Edward Street, died in infancy;

Simon Street, married Rachel Casper;

Lila Street, Simon's twin, died of whooping cough;

Esther Jane Street eight and Alice 22, died of diphtheria the same week.

Simon and his boys hauled timber from Lake Creek, to the Ontario Mine at Park City, with four four-horse teams. He owned and operated the first threshing machine in Wasatch County, with Joseph Galli and Andrew Luke as equal owners in the same.

Simon was a good violinist. He played all over the county and at Park City and Snyderville for dances in his younger years.

In his later years there never was a children's dance at Midway without him there to play. He and Ann sang duets together.

Simon and Ann Kay Street raised sixteen children not including the three who died. Also two grandchildren—Grace Reese and Thelma Edwards.
